GRAND RAPIDS BOYS WIN SATURDAY'S GAME EASILY

Anybody who watched that game of football on Saturday between the Rapids and Waupun was surely a Simon pure enthusiast, for the weather was anything but pleasant for the spectators, and with the ground was covered with snow and there was a cold wind blowing, it must have been a doubtful pleasure for the players themselves.

Grand Rapids won the game by a score of 21 to 0, the locals having made a touchdown and kicked goal in each of the first three quarters.

The quarters were shortened five minutes by mutual consent of the two contesting teams, the weather making it anything but comfortable for an occasion of this sort.

This was the first game that Waupun has been beaten this year, and while the locals made steady gains most of the time, the visitors put up a sturdy defense at all times, and the home boys had to play for all they got.

Our boys put up the best game they have this season, and some good plays, were made on several occasions. The team work was also better than it has been heretofore this season, and it looks very much as if the boys had the material there all the time, but for some reason had failed to get the best out of business earlier in the season.

Mr. Amundson is in favor of putting in a concrete surface on this road, so as to make it as permanent as possible, while macadam roads were considered to be about the proper thing a few years ago, experience has proven that they are anything but permanent, and where they have been built and maintained for a number of years it has been found that the annual cost of upkeep and repairs amounts to from five to eighteen dollars per year.

Mr. Amundson also stated that there are portions of the road that should be wider than the average country road, as the traffic near both the cities of Marshfield and Grand Rapids is so heavy as to demand a double track instead of the nine foot track as has been put down in most of the places in the country.

The members of the county board made a trip over the road on Saturday, being the guests of Mayor Odgen of this city and Mayor Peifer of Marshfield. They were taken to the city of Marshfield and had dinner at the asylum about one o'clock, returning to this city in the afternoon. After dinner they stopped at the depot and Saturday for traveling outside as it has been for some time past, the road was in pretty good shape, and the cars made fairly good time, so that the trip was fairly well enjoyed by all. As the board had adjourned that morning the members from the north end were enabled to remain at their homes when they got there, and did not have to return to this city.

Louis Amundson was re-elected County Highway Commissioner at the Friday session of the board, he having no opposition. Mr. Amundson during the years he has held office has made an excellent record, and nobody questions his sincerity.

Mr. Amundson for highway commissioners resulted in the choice of Geo. W. Brown of Pittsville, Ernest Fleischman of Fort Edwards and J. A. Chapman of Cameron. J. S. Thompson of this city was re-elected trustee of the Wood County Asylum.

The committee on Common Schools elected on Friday consists of P. N. Christensen, of the town of Lincoln, H. H. Voss of the village of Neekoosa and Robert Morris of the town of Arpin.

The matter of woodland adjacent to the asylum near Marshfield was taken up and discussed, and it was decided to buy the land, same to cost not to exceed $4,000. This land will furnish outside employment to certain inmates of the asylum and will also furnish wood for the fastigation.

THE COUNTY BOARD GIVES ROAD MONEY

IS SHORT ON ALDERMEN.
Resignation of Three Members is Causing Comment.

At the last meeting of the city council at Pittsville three of the aldermen handed in their resignations and with one that had gone before this left only two men to answer to roll call when the mayor seated himself in the executive chair.

The one that resigned are G. W. Stevens, J. J. Elbro and R. W. Lust.

These men were members of the city council for many years and were up in arms because the mayor did not enforce their demands when they came to him.

According to C. A. Ludwig, after the sidewalk was condemned Ludwig threatened to shoot anybody who touched his walk, after which he had succeeded in killing a duck on the reservoir south of their place, and north of the turnpike that runs through the town. The duck was out toward the Gaynor place. As the duck was out away from the shore a boat was secured in which to go after it. Raymond had climbed into the boat, which was rather of an old affair, when it was decided to remove the water from the boat before going on.

Poor Demand for Woodsmen.

Reports are to the effect that there will be a very light demand for laborers in the woods this coming winter, owing to the fact that most of the lumber companies are going to cut out their cut this year.

There has been a pretty fair demand for lumber during the past season, but prices have ruled pretty low in most places in spite of this fact, and for this reason it is stated the lumber companies of Wisconsin and Northern Michigan will cut less lumber than usual this year.

Mr. Amundson also stated that there are portions of the road that should be wider than the average country road, as the traffic near both the cities of Marshfield and Grand Rapids is so heavy as to demand a double track instead of the nine foot track as has been put down in most of the places in the country.

THE COUNTY BOARD GIVES ROAD MONEY

The numbers of the county board last week appropriated the sum of $10,000 for the trunk line road between this city and Marshfield, one-half of the money to be used between Pittsville and Marshfield and one-half between Grand Rapids and Pittsville.

The three that resigned are G. W. Stevens, J. J. Elbe and R. W. Lust. These men were members of the street committee and they were up in arms because the mayor did not enforce their demands when they condemned a piece of sidewalk belonging to C. A. Ludewig. After the sidewalk was condemned Ludewig threatened somebody to touch his sidewalk again, so he got his gun and went out to his barn to get a shotgun. He had succeeded in killing a duck on the river south of the place, and north of the turnpike, so he went toward the Gaynor place. As the duck was away from the shore a hawk was seen which he followed. It was a Ray and had dived into the water, which was rather of an old affair, when it was decided to remove the water from the boat before going out.

Baby Demand for Woodsman.
Reports are to the effect that there will be a very light demand for laborers in the woods this coming winter, owing to the fact that most of the lumber companies are going to cut their cut this year. There has been a fairly fair demand for lumber during the past season, but prices have ruled pretty low in most cases in spite of this fact, and for this reason it is said that the lumber companies of Wisconsin and Northern Michigan will sell lumber that is not as good as last year. Another reason is probably because there is less lumber in the pines in the country.

The members of the county board made a trip over the road on Saturday, being the guests of Mayor Cohen of this city and Mayor Falter of Marshfield. They were taken to the city of Marshfield and called a dinner at the asylum about one o'clock, returning to this city in the afternoon. Although the weather was not as pleasant on Saturday for traveling outside as it has been for some time past, the road was in pretty good condition, and the cars made fairly well, so that the trip was fairly well enjoyed by all. As the board had adjourned that morning the members attended the funeral of Mrs. Ernest Edwards at Port Edwards and J. A. Chapman of Cameron. J. S. Thompson of this city was re-elected trustee of Port Edwards and J. A. Chapman of Cameron. J. S. Thompson of this city was re-elected trustee of the Wood County Asylum.

The committee on Common Schools elected on Friday consists of P. N. Christensen, of the town of Lincoln, H. V. Yoss of the village of Nekoosa and Robert Morris of the town of Arpin. The election for Highway commissioners resulted in the choice of Geo. W. Brown of Pittsville, Ernest Edwards of Port Edwards and J. A. Chapman of Cameron. J. S. Thompson of this city was re-elected trustee of the Wood County Asylum.

The election for Highway commissioners at the County Highway Commission at the Friday session of the board, he having no opposition. Mr. Anderson, during the year, has held office, and he has made an excellent officer, and no body questions his sincerity.

The loss was quite a severe one for Mr. Seeger, as he lost another horse only a short time ago. Another thing that has set him back for several years was the fact that he fell from a barn that he was building several years ago, hurting his back, and it is almost impossible to do anything for it. The animal was a mule.

The Golden Death

Revelations of An Ambassador-at-Large

Transcribed by H. M. Egbert from the private papers of an Englishman who for a time was an unofficial diplomat in the most secret service of the British Government.

(Copyright, 1915, by W. G. Chapman.)

I shall begin this narration by revealing a fact which, by all the rules of story telling, should be kept for the culminating surprise. Yet perhaps the power of the British boudoirs is more or less public property, and it is known that the late King Leopold of Belgium did not really die from the effects of an operation alleged to have been performed upon him in his seventy-third year.

"He is not dead"—the last king—his subjects need to tell him. For days at a time he would disappear from the knot of able subjects and ministers, buying affairs of state to settle themselves, while he banished one or other of his numerous retiring places, abiding in it like a hermit, who had already become a master passion.

The many ages character of the old man has been much dwelt on. It is true he was neither a good husband nor a good father; it is true he sought pleasure which, comparatively vented in youth, are not regarded with condonation in a grandfather. But he had one passion mightier than all which came to dominate him to the exclusion of every other. That was vanity.

In a way it had proved the strongest asset of his realm. Certainly under Leopold Belgium had prospered as never before. He administered her affairs with prudence; but then he was damed in the eyes of all decent men by the atrocities in the Congo Free State, where his agents hunted down and murdered or enslaved the helpless natives. In order that Leopold might find his pockets with the proceeds of the rubber extorted by forced labor from the villagers,

The hidden and mysterious illness, then, the story of the old man's death, was a polite fiction, destined to pave the way to King Albert's accession to the Belgian throne. Leopold had become an imbecility. Faced with an ultimatum, and promised the security of his kingdom, the old king abdicated his abdication without enough energy to dominate him to the exclusion of every other. That was vanity.

Now whether his crafty mind was breaking down, or whether, below the surface of civilization, there lay a strain of medievalism, it is not for me to say, but Leopold, in retirement, became possessed by exactly the same deities which have haunted so many rulers of old days. He sought, in fact, two things, one of which, at least once, everywhere believed in, became regarded as a myth when modern science was born, and again seemed possible at the opening of the twentieth century, when the transmutation of the elements was proved to be not beyond the bounds of feasibility.

One was the elixir of life. The other was the philosopher's stone, or its modern equivalent, which turns all metals into gold.

To have perpetual youth and gold beyond compensation became the dreams of an old man of inventive genius.

I was not at that time in the employ of the British government. I had, in fact, been compelled to resign my ambassadorship owing to a certain indiscretion, and I had conducted a certain investigation for the foreign office. Yet, being in touch with the secret affairs of nations, I knew the facts of Leopold's retirement. I knew that he was living quietly in Cornwall, where, under the name of Leopold de Lys, he had purchased a small property in a lonely region bordering upon the sea, a manor which had passed the royalties, amounting from numerous tin mines, now abandoned.

The lead mines of Cornwall were nearly worked out now, but they were formerly the richest in the world. The galleries were driven far under the sea until a point was reached where no glowering scence could no longer compete with the problem except at cost which made the further working of these mines impracticable. Far underneath the waves which leap above the old submerged kingdom of Lynessore, the lead deposits richer than any in the world, but never to be worked so long as lead remains one of the cheaper metals.

It was in the spring of 1913 that received a communication from the foreign office asking me to call at a certain hour upon a certain day on a matter of importance. The letter was signed by one of the permanent staff.

As I had been vainly seeking for some time to obtain an interview, in the hope of securing another diplomatic appointment, I naturally concluded that my petitions had at last been heard. And my hopes ran high when, calling at the appointed time, I was shown up into Sir Edward Grey's office.

He was seated beside the fire in a big leather armchair, and with him, engaged in earnest conversation, was a man whom I had never met before. He looked like a church dignitary, if nut.

"I am glad to see you, Mr. X—" said Sir Edward, rising and giving me a cordial handshake. "Permit me to introduce to you Mr. Graves, one of the Wholesaler directors."

My hopes of a regular appointment were dashed to the ground by Sir Edward's ensuing remark.

"We are faced to face with a very perplexing problem, Mr. X—" he said, "and you alone of all the men I know are capable of assisting in its solution. You are, of course, acquainted with a certain fact relative to the late King of the Belgians, which must not be permitted to be made public property."

"I am aware that a fleet de Lys has purchased a villa and small manorial right in Cornwall," I answered.

ORDER OF CROWN OF INDIA

Decoration Which is Highly Praised by the Female Subjects of the British Empire.

Another decoration exclusive to women is the Imperial Order of the Crown of India. This was founded by Queen Victoria and is bestowed upon the wives of the Indian viceroys, upon certain of the native Indian princesses, and very occasionally upon noble women connected with the viceroyal court. Lady Randolph Churchill is one of the best-known women who have been the recipients of this coveted decoration.

The order was instituted by royal warrant on January 1, 1878, and the first investiture took place on April 29 following, when 12 ladies in all were decorated amid scenes of pomp and ordered splendor such as had rarely been witnessed in this country.

Among the recipients, however, were several who, although of high social standing, had little or no direct connection with India; but since then the honor has been more sparingly granted, as well as more befittingly bestowed.

The insignia of this coveted order is very beautiful, consisting of the Royal Imperial Cipher, V. R. I., in diamonds, pearls and turquoise, with an oval ornamental border of pearls. Surmounted by the imperial crown. The ribbon is of light blue watered silk, edged with white—Pearsons.

I once knew a man whose wife exhibited more than three hundred love letters in court, which he had written her during a brief courtship of eleven weeks. He often wrote her six or more in one day, and his shortest epistles contained four pages. And yet, before they had been married two months he had slapped her jaws so far around that when she wanted to talk into the telephone she had to back up to it. His excuse was that he had exhausted his affection in the course of the correspondence."

Law Official Looked So Much Like Husband That Woman Simply Could Not Stop Scolding.

A woman from the pineland belt, who had seen a railroad only once, and who had ridden in to Atlanta's Decatur street on her husband's wagon, was arrested for talking back to an officer of the law.

"She jabbered steadily for a half hour, when I told her she must not stand so long, squarely in the middle of the street," explained the officer who had made the arrest. "I couldn't even get a word in edgeways. It was the most awful gab I ever heard."

Turning to the prisoner the judge said:

"What have you to say for yourself, madam?"

"Coughn't help it, Judge," responded the offender, "tried to ter shes up, but th' officer looked so much like my husband! I jes' couldn't find the heart to stop!"—Case and Comment.

Cleaning Garments.

In cleaning a whole garment it is a good plan first to wash well, and second, to mark each spot with white thread before putting into the gasine bath. Then the spots can be found and given special attention without much searching. The best way of removing the dirt after using gasoline, as advised in the Handbook of Cleaning, by Sarah J. MacLeod, is to pour the gasoline back into the jug through a piece of filter paper, obtainable at any drug store. Gasoline should be kept tightly corked, in steno jugs, and preferably out of the house.

BADGER SCHOOLS TO HOLD EXHIBITS

Have Reached Greatest Success in Fond du Lac, Manitowoc, Oconto, Sauk, Sheboygan, St. Croix and Iowa Counties.

MADISON.—More than 500 agricultural fairs will be held in little rural schoolhouses of Wisconsin this fall and winter. As much public interest is attached to some of these fairs as to many larger fairs, and in some communities every family will attend them.

Rural School Inspector W. E. Larson of the state superintendent's staff says the school fairs are at their height. In some districts exhibits at them exceed 200.

According to Inspector Larson, the school fairs accomplish three things worth while in any community.

First—They teach the relationship between the farm, home and the school.

Second—they interest the child in real things.

Third—Rivalry among the children to grow prize-winning exhibits sets the germ of inspiration in the whole community.

The school fair plan origin is uncertain, but it has reached its greatest limits and scored its biggest successes in Sack, Manitowoc, Sheboygan, Fond du Lac, St. Croix, Iowa and Oconto counties.

In every school there is a fair at which there are exhibits of vegetables, poultry, fruits and grains. In others several districts will join in harvest festivals.

Rhinelander Dry for First Time in Many Years—Members of W. C. T. U. Present Petitions.

Rhinelander—Sunday, for the first time in years, with the possible exception of a couple of weeks a few years ago, during a political fight, Rhinelander saloons observed the Sunday closing law. Screens were removed and doors were swung in twenty-eight saloons, giving complete views of entire barrooms.

The "dry" Sunday was the result of the evacuation of Riga was begun the Russian government ordered the removal of the monument of Peter the Great from the city. The enormous statue was booted up, but because of its weight the railroad decided to transport it. It was therefore decided to send it to Petrograd by water. After many difficulties the statue was finally loaded on a transport steamer, but this vessel encountered German torpedo boats and was sunk when it tried to leave the bay in Riga due to loss of the monument had been kept secret, but it is well known that the Great Peter who was sent to the bottom of the sea was dubbed "commander of the Russian submarine fleet" by local wits.

Meant in Kindness.

A policeman had told two old vagabonds sitting in the park to move on, and as I followed them along the street one of them said:

"Jim, I think he means us kindly."

"Yes, I think he does, too."

"He knows that we'd be apt to sit there until we got a cabin and then pneumonia and death might follow."

"That's it."

"Whereas, if he tells us to move on we keep our blood circulating, avoid all danger, and are spared to our friends and the world."

"That's correct."

Which is very kindly of him indeed, Jim; and if it so happens that we meet him again, we'll impress him with the fact that we know how to be grateful, even if we aren't high-toned nor rich!"—Baltimore American.

“I was astonished, Mr. Mayor, that you will not let us go to lunch.”

“And I am surprised,” replied the mayor, “that a man who has got so much ‘ham’ in his mouth should want any lunch at all.”

TURN OVER TIME When Nature Hints About the Food.

When there's no relish to food and all that one eats doesn't seem to do any good then is the time to make a turn-over in the diet, for that's nature's way of dropping a hint that the food isn't the kind required.

For a number of years I followed railroad work, much of it being office work of a trying nature. Meal times were our busiest; and eating too much and too quickly of food such as is commonly served in hotels and restaurants, together with the sedentary habits, were not long in giving me dyspepsia and stomach trouble which reduced my weight from 205 to 160 pounds.

There was little relish in any food and none of it seemed to do me any good. It seemed the more I ate the poorer I got and was always hungry before another meal, no matter how much I had eaten.

Then I commenced a trial of Grape-Nuts food, and was surprised how a small saucer of it would carry me along, strong, and with satisfied appetite, until the next meal, with no sensations of hunger, weakness or distress as before.

I have been following this diet now for several months and my improvement has been so great all the others in my family have taken up the use of Grape-Nuts with complete satisfaction and much improvement in health.

THAT IS something is wrong with baby, but we can't tell just what it is. All mothers recognize the term by the lassitude, weakness, loss of appetite, inclination to sleep, heavy breathing, and lack of interest shown by baby. These are the symptoms of sickness. It may be fever, congestion, worms, croup, diphtheria, or scarlatina. Do not lose a minute. Give the child Castoria. It will start the digestive organs into operation, open the pores of the skin, carry off the foetid matter, and drive away the threatened sickness.

Zeppepins or Spiders?

A story is told of a young French woman who observed with punctiliousness the wartime precautions ordered by the police.

She kept the shutters closed at night and the curtains pulled down, so that not a speck of light would escape from her apartments. But one night, when reading the newspaper, she said that she had reached the limit.

The newspapers said that if the Zeppepins came all persons must go into the cellar. She told her friends she would not go down into the cellar.

"I do not care a fig for the Zeppepins," she said. "It is no use attacking me. I will not go down into the cellar."

"But why?" asked her friend. "Because," she replied, "I am afraid of spiders."

Little Tommy passed for a very practical youth. The other day his Uncle John bought him, as a birthday present, a "word game," which Tommy had never played, and which did not seem to be particularly attractive to him.

Nevertheless, Tommy did not forget to thank his uncle, and by and by, edging round his chair, he asked:

"I say, Uncle John!"

"Well?"

"This game really belongs to me now, doesn't it?"

"Why, of course."

"To do just as I want with it?"

"Certainly."

"Then I'll tell you what I'll do—I'll sell it to you for a shilling."

Too Much Ham to Be Hungry.

An English town council, after a protracted sitting, was desirous of adjourning for lunch.

The proposition was opposed by the mayor, who thought that if his fellow citizens felt that the stimulus of hunger the dispatch of business would be much facilitated. At last a rather ill-tempered member got up and exclaimed:

"I have astonished, I am surprised, I have amazed, Mr. Mayor, that you will not let us go to lunch."

"And I am surprised," replied the mayor. "That a man who has got so much 'ham' in his mouth should want any lunch at all."

SALOONS CLOSED ON SUNDAY

Rhineland Dry for First Time in Many Years—Members of W. C. T. U. Present Petitions.

Rhineland.—Sunday, for the first time in years, with the possible exception of a couple of weeks a few years ago, during a political fight, Rhineland saloons observed the Sunday closing law. Screens were removed and doors were swung in twenty-eight saloons, giving complete views of entire barrooms.

The "dry" Sunday was the result of an order of Mayor Fred Anderson, issued Saturday afternoon. In addition to cautioning the saloonists against violation of the law, he instructed the chief of police to arrest any offender.

The mayor's action was in response to a petition of 600 signatures presented to him early in the week by members of the W. C. T. U. The women of the union had threatened wholesale prosecutions in the event of further violations.

SENATOR SCOTT DIES

PROMINENT LEGISLATOR SUCUMBS FOLLOWING LONG ILLNESS.

Represented Twenty-ninth District in 1915 Legislature—Chairman of Finance Committee.

Barron.—George E. Scott of Prairie Farm, senator from the Twenty-ninth district and chairman of the Senate finance committee of the 1915 legislature, died at his home after a long illness, due, it is said, to overwork.

Six weeks before the close of the session the senator's health became impaired and he was given a leave of absence to recuperate. At the time he expected to resume his duties within a fortnight, but he failed to rally and his death has been daily expected by friends for the past week.

Senator Scott was born in Durand, Wis., in 1859 and received his common school education there. He was a merchant and miller, and since 1894 had been active in politics as a Republican, being elected to the Senate in that year and returned at each subsequent session.

GET EGGS FOR HATCHERIES

Conservation Commission Busy Preparing for Propagation of Lake and Brook Varieties.

Madison.—More than 500 agricultural fairs will be held in little rural schoolhouses of Wisconsin this fall and winter. As much public interest is attached to some of these fairs as to many larger fairs, and in some communities every family will attend them.

Rural School Inspector W. E. Larson, of the state superintendent's staff says the school fairs are at their height.

First—They teach the relationship between the farm, home and the school.

Second—They interest the child in real things.

Third—Rivalry among the children to grow prize winning exhibits scatters the germ of inspiration in the whole community.

The school fair plan origin is uncertain, but it has reached its greatest limits and scored its biggest successes in Sauk, Manitowoc, Sheboygan, Fond du Lac, St. Croix, Iowa and Oconto counties.

In some every school has a fair at which there are exhibits of vegetables, poultry, fruits and grains. In others several districts will join in harvest festivals.

PROBLEMS OF THE DAY.

Madison.—The Wisconsin conservation commission is busy collecting lake and trout eggs for propagation in the hatcheries. This is the spawning season for these members of the trout family. Some forty men are working on fishing tugs running out of the many ports on the Great Lakes.

Prospects are that this year will show the greatest collection of lake trout eggs in the history of the fishery department. Lake trout eggs run approximately 250,000 to the bushel and the commission anticipates the collection of some 200 bushels, a total of approximately 50,000,000 eggs.

The department also anticipates the collection of some 100,000,000 whitefish, bluefin and herring eggs in December.

ANNUAL CONFERENCE OF OLDER BOYS

The Thirteenth Annual Older Boys Conference will be held under the auspices of the state Y. M. C. A. and the Wisconsin Sunday School Association at Eau Claire, No. 26, 27, 28, 1915. The object of the conference is to bring together the boys who are leaders and workers in the religious organization in their community. At the conference experts will speak on methods and efficiency of religious work for boys.

Boys from 15 to 20 years, and workers with boys of all denominations are eligible and urged to attend this convention. The program abounds in addresses, banquets, music and various entertainments.

This is the first time since this movement was started thirteen years ago that the conference is to be held this section of the state.

Of the 574 delegates present at the 1914 convention 65 localities were represented. The average age of the boys was seventeen years, and 315 were high school pupils. Think of it! Nearly 600 boys, all mainly fellows imbued with the Christian spirit and all wanting to be of real service.

In this instance Eau Claire will sustain her reputation for hospitality in entertaining the visitors. Provisions have been made to furnish lodgings and meals free, including a mammoth banquet in the largest auditorium in the city. An orchestra will play during the banquet. John Alexander of Chicago is the principal speaker. High school girls will serve. More than 600 boys will attend and aousing time is expected.

Many special events, including sight-seeing trips, gymnasium, games and swimming.

Eau Claire is beautifully situated at the junction of the Eau Claire and Chippewa rivers. A chain of parks surround the city, including Carson park and Half Moon Lake on the west and Putnam Drive on the south. At the Falls Dam water power is developed and converted into electric power which is used to light the city and run the large factories and small power plants. Eau Claire is recognized as an educational center.

The expense of attending this conference is the railroad fare and 75 cents registration fee.

It is recommended that delegates arrive early on Friday that they may get acquainted, see the city, have some recreation and thus be ready to go to the Conference Headquarters in the Y. M. C. A. building, where the delegation meets the entertainment committee and secure places of entertainment, badges, souvenirs, programs, etc.

For registration cards or information write G. W. Hovey, Y. M. C. A., Eau Claire, Wis.

ANNUAL CONFERENCE OF OLDER BOYS

The Thirteenth Annual Older Boys Conference will be held under the auspices of the state Y. M. C. A. and the Wisconsin Sunday School association at Eau Claire, No. 26, 27, 28, 1915. The object of the conference is to bring together the boys who are leaders and workers in the religious organizations in their community. At the conference experts will speak on methods and principles of religious work for boys.

Boys from 15 to 20 years, and workers in boys of all denominations are eligible and urged to attend this convention. The program abounds in addresses, banquets, music and various entertainments.

This is the first time since this movement was started thirteen years ago that the conference is to be held in this section of the state.

Of the 574 delegates present at the 1914 convention 65 localities were represented and the average age of the boys was seventeen years.

215 were high school pupils. Think of it! Nearly 600 boys, all mainly boys imbued with the Christian spirit and all wanting to be of real service.

In this instance Eau Claire will sustain her reputation for hospitality in entertaining the visitors. Provisions have been made to furnish lodgings and meals free, including a luncheon banquet in the largest auditorium in the city. An orchestra will play during the banquet. John Alexander of Chicago is the principal speaker. High school girls will serve. More than 600 boys will attend and a housing plan is expected.

Many special stunts, including sightseeing trips, gymnasium, games and swimming.

Eau Claire is beautifully situated at the junction of the Eau Claire and Chippewa rivers. A chain of parks surround the city, including Carson park and Half Moon Lake on the west and Putnam Drive on the south. At the Falls Dam water power is developed and converted into electric power which is used to light the city and run the large factories and small power plants. Eau Claire is recognized as an educational center.

The expense of attending this conference is the railroad fare and 75 cents registration fee.

It is recommended that delegates arrive early on Friday that they may get acquainted, see the city, have some recreation and thus be ready to go to the Conference Headquarters in the Y. M. C. A. building, where the delegation meets the entertainment committee and secure places of entertainment, badges, souvenir programs, etc.

For registration cards or information write G. W. Hovey, Y. M. C. A., Eau Claire, Wis.

Calamity Jane was a true justice
Shaly of iron and teeth of iron Gangs shunned, rebels had to be

As a actor for them there is little pain
Just the sort of a man you folks has got A sun grin in the spur for Me and Cal I did we wins

But the world forgave us quick as fast
But it ain't easy to forgive that

But she's key again poverty still

But I do like be iron y oral
With her bony mouth and kickin foot

Dear Doctor—In reply to your letter regarding my goitre, will say that it has gone after three months treatment with you. I had my goitre about 18 years, and had doctor with Dr. Foster and Dr. D. of Martine for a year without any relief. When I finished treatment with you I weighed 131 lbs more than I ever did in my life. I feel fine in every way and cannot praise your skill in curing me too highly. I shall certainly advise my friends in need of treatment to come and see you. I do not begrudge the money I have spent in getting cured and would not go back as I am for ten times what cost me. All I can say is that I will always be your physician in the future and I want to thank you for all you have done for me

Calamity Jane

Calamity Jane was a cow — just now!
Shy of rib and low of bow.
Grazed-skinned and seemed to be
A proper cow for a man like me.
None of you blue blood in her veins.
Just a cow for a man that can't take pains;
Just the sort of a cow you folks has got A eatin' grass in the pasture lot.

Me and Calamity Jane was twin
In both' point, and the ain't no sins
That the world'll forgive ye, quick as east,
For it ain't so keen on forgivin' that Calamity Jane, she did her best.
She's my farm from east to west,
It's hay and corn she herds,
But her ribs, they sayin', "poverty" still.

But I sort of liked the ornery brute.
With her bony mouth and kickin' foot
She come along when the "sooner" came,
And the sort of like me the local name
Or hein' the owner of cow an' such,
Any neighbor that I was growin' rich!
An' the fan' was purpin' me dollar a year
So Calamity Jane kept a stayin' here.

Then a neighbor of mine he come along
An' he say my dobe was all dead wrong,
An' he figured it out that fer feedin' an' care
"Bout all I got was hide an' hair."
"An' you know what, when your notes come due,
She'd only fetch ye a pot of glue;
An' yet pardon me neighbor I'm speakin' plain.—
Yer a fool to board Calamity Jane."

Then I told him straight, "You mind yer biz;
"Calamity Jane is as good as they is!"
But he just kept comin' "If she's your best Yon sure are in need of the Babcock test."
Said, "Who was, that well-dressed travelin' man?"
An' he drove on home an' Martha Ann
An' I seen how her dress was old an' plain,—
And it struck me "Perhaps it's Calamity Jane!"
And it struck me "Perhaps it's Calamity Jane!"

So I figured it out with our creamery man
What the average worth of her milkin' run:
She was more a vampire, hidin' there,
And I tell ye, straight on yer sittin' there,
The schoolin' my children couldn't get,
The work an' worry that made us fret,
Our drudgin' an' scruplin' of hand and brain
Was goin' to board Calamity Jane!

So I swapped off Jane an' three head more
For a cow I wouldn't a tech before—Smooth an' sulky, an' what was best
A cow that had stood the Babcock test;
An' if you've an hour or two to spare
I kin show you the best herd anywhere;
An' a meal in our new house'll make it plain
That we've left off a-boarding Calamity Jane.

WINTER CARE OF STOCK

Profitable Wintering of Farm Animals Depends Largely Upon Economic Feeding.

The fall season is here and with it approaches the winter feeding problem. It is time to consider what feed can most profitably be used. Grains will be light and should be fed judiciously. The bulk of the feed used for wintering stock should be made up of roughages from the farm. Small amounts of concentrates, fed daily with these feeds, make comparatively cheap rations entirely suitable to certain classes of live stock.

For convenience in planning winter feeding, farm animals may be divided into three classes:

I. Mature animals not producing an income.

II. Animals producing an income during the winter.

III. Young and growing stock to be retained on the farm the following summer.

In Class I may be included all mature live stock held on the farm, either for breeding purposes, future work, or finishing for market the following summer.

In Class II may be included work horses, cows producing milk, and stock being fattened for market or conditioned for sale during the winter months.

In Class III may be included all young and growing stock on the farm.

The big saving in the winter bill can be made with Class I. This does not mean that animals of this class should be permitted to come thru the winter in a run down and weakened condition. Rather than consider such a practice, it would be far better to sell the stock in the fall. It is meant, however, that they can, and should be maintained on the cheaper feeds. Roughages, supplemented with a small amount of concentrates (oil meal or grain) are in favor for them. Give the horses and cattle sheep access to cut-over grain fields and straw stacks, meadows, wood lots, and pastures. Horses and sheep may have access to husked out corn fields. In certain sections where losses of cattle have been experienced in the past from so-called corn stalk disease farmers should consider this fact before turning cattle into such fields. As the winter advances open the bars to shelters, feed racks, and grain troughs.

Corn silage will be invaluable at this time, especially for cattle and sheep. Keep the feed troughs filled with corn stover and straw, but do not be wasteful in the feeding.

The amount of grain to be put in the trough can not be definitely given. The same should vary in accordance with the severeness of the winter and condition of the stock. This is a point that can only be decided in the feed lot.

To permit the stock to go entirely without concentrates at this time would be a grave mistake, and in all probability make impossible the task of bringing it to spinal feed in a healthy and vigorous condition. Such a condition is important in the care of breeding animals and essential for feeders if best results are to be obtained.

The matter of feeding hogs, included in Class I, presents an entirely different problem from that of the other stock. It is true that they may profitably be run on grain fields, meadows and pastures before snow arrives, but concentrates must constitute much of their ration after outside fields are closed for winter.

Roots, chopped alfalfa, hay, apples and waste products of the dairy and household will do much toward keeping down the cost of their winter feed.

In fact, any products that will substitute for the forages and grasses in the fields, which feeds are so essential to the conditioning of broad hogs, can well be used.

Concerning the feed for stock in the early fall, the best way to prevent such destruction is to forestall it. Keep the road dry and remember that the road is so pronounced that the roadway is softened by the frost. Keep the road up; sometimes one round trip before the rut begins to form the hard dry surface formed in the summer is soon becoming softened by the fall and winter rains and snow. When the rain falls begin to drag the earth and gravel road should be dragged frequently to prevent the formation of ruts and the collection of water. All travel places on mud roads should be filled and compacted.

During the winter whenever a thaw is coming on, the cross roads and side ditches should be opened up as far as possible so as to prevent water collecting along the roadside.

If the thaw is so pronounced that the roadway is softened, the drag should be used; sometimes one round trip before the rut begins to form the hard dry surface formed in the summer is soon becoming softened by the fall and winter rains and snow. When the rain falls begin to drag the earth and gravel road should be dragged frequently to prevent the formation of ruts and the collection of water. All travel places on mud roads should be filled and compacted.

Temporary repairs to roads are, or at least should be confined to emergency measures. In proportion to the results obtained, temporary work is always expensive and is never justified by ordinary conditions. Unusual conditions, however, often occur to plague the road man. For example, the closing of a main highway to traffic because of construction, repair, or washouts may suddenly throw a heavy traffic for a short time on a little used and unimproved byway. Clearly, in such case temporary expedients are legitimate.

The most common troubles met in a case of this kind are mudholes and ruts. If the soil is heavy, and dust and loose sand if the soil is light and sandy.

On a clay or gumbo road mudholes usually cause the most trouble. As water is absolutely necessary for the existence of a mudhole, any treatment, whether temporary or permanent in character, must provide for getting rid of the water. The first step is, therefore, to dig a trench to the side and allow the water and mud to drain. If necessary, open the ditches clear, remove all the soft mud left in the bottom of the trench.

WHEN a man kicks the kinks out of his tobacco delusions and learns how good, real tobacco is, he naturally feels pretty happy all over. Naturally too, he don't want to hog a good thing all to himself, so he lets his friends know the big difference there is between the ordinary big wad and the little satisfying Real Tobacco Chew.

A little chew of pure, rich, mellow tobacco—seasoned and sweetened just enough—cuts out so much of the grinding and spitting.

ASK YOUR DEALER FOR W-B CUT CHEWING TOBACCO. IT IS THE NEW "REAL TOBACCO CHEW"—CUT LONG SHRED.

Take less than one-quarter the old size chew. It will be more satisfying than a mouthful of ordinary tobacco. Just take a nibble of it until you find the strength chew that suits you, then select only what the real tobacco taste commands, how it satisfies, how much less you have to spit, how few chews you take to be tobacco satisfied. That's why it is The Real Tobacco Chew. That's why it costs less in the end.

The taste of pure, rich tobacco does not need to be covered up. An excess of licorice and sweetening makes you spit too much.

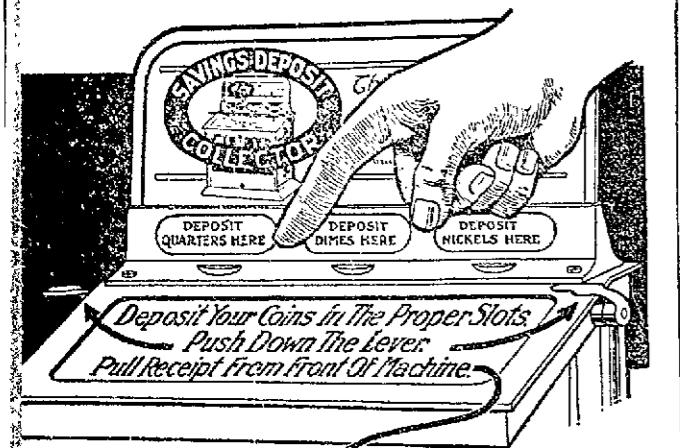

One small chew takes the place of two big chews of the old kind.

Notice how the salt brings out the rich tobacco taste.

CARE OF DAIRY CALVES

The Production of a Profitable Cow Depends largely upon the Method of Handling the Calf.

Careful attention on the part of the dairyman during the two weeks prior to calving will often mean the ultimate addition to his head of a large, well-developed, milking cow, instead of a sickly, underfed, stunted animal. The problem of raising calves today is more complicated than when it was economy to fatten a calf for a pocket full of shooting gallery cigars, and by night have his ward clasped, provided some other Yahoos did not happen along to him, and electric day and swing things the other way.
But it isn't so many more. Now adeedy: We have passed the law prohibiting ourselves from treating ourselves while running for office, and the presence of a live organ is the pocket of a politician is prima facie evidence that he is a scoundrel and a crook, if it is impossible for him to qualify for the team. Years ago there used to be a church organization up in the northern end of the county that held a fair about the middle of October during campaign years. The reverend gentleman who presided over the destinies of this church used to get word to those who were running for office, so they say, hinting that it would be just as well for them if they would pay a visit to the fair during its session and take a chance on a few soft pillows, etc.
So the politicians would go to the fair in larger numbers, and the men who were the blind leaders found it was the blind leaders that far, or if your grantor owns that far. Make sure you have this right of access, for land without access is practically worthless. The companies always except from their policies all rights in streets, therefore the question of some company's lawyer is advisable, probably a specialist in such matters.

Second—What are your rights as an abutting owner in the street?
Have your bats easement of light, air and access over the street? These rights extend only for a block in each direction, with access to the nearest public highway. If the street has been dedicated that far, or if the original owners was certainly entitled to make the angels wear a pleasant look. And thus the politician would bring his way into heaven and office at one and the same time.
But we have purified ourselves now and it is no wonder that Mrs.
Younans has discovered the fact.
Any woman, even a gimmer of intelligence, could see at a glance to what a high state of perfection the politics of Wisconsin have been broken during the past few years. First start out with your organization, this primary election is one of the greatest purifiers of politics that exists in the country today. You see in the good old days before Bob La-Follette contracted the habit of having a sore throat every fall from speaking at county fairs, they used to have partly organizations. Men of one belief got together, talked over what was best for the party, who was the strongest man to run for office, and what promises it was best to make to the people. This kind of held the party together and enabled the members to tax an organization with the name of a political party.
The only thing that was calculated to do anybody's life was the fact that both parties were afflited by the same rules so that it was a general purifying all around. So it can plainly see that a political party can no longer be made of any kind of any organization, and without organization it is impossible to be very corrupt, so it is no wonder that our party is so apparent that Mrs.
Younans discovered it upon her return from the East. We boldly doff our hat to Mrs. Youmans and confidently admit the allegation.

Fifth—Are any assessments pending which have not yet become liens, and which, therefore, your tax search will not disclose?

Sixth—What assessments are probable in the near future. The condition of the street will give you some idea to start with. Has it been legally opened, regulated and graded, curbed, paved and sidewalked? Have the lateral and trunk sewers serving your district been installed? If any of these appear on the ground find out whether the real estate for them has been paid. If they have been paid by the municipality, borough or township, find out whether they are in conformity with legal requirements, or whether they have been legally accepted by the public authorized to pass upon them. Do not forget about adjoining streets. It is possible that your lots may come within the areas of assessment for several of them.

Seventh—Are there any cemeteries or other properties existing from estate in your immediate vicinity?
so, you may not only have to pay your own share of the assessments, but a part of the cemetery's share as well.

On some of these points you can protect yourself on a properly drawn contract, without preliminary investigation, but on most of them the best way is to investigate first and buy afterward.

WHY NOT RAISE HIM?

One fact that becomes very apparent to the person who takes the trouble to investigate the matter is that Wood County does not pay a very large salary to the Highway Commissioner, considering the amount of responsibility he has to shoulder, the number of men under his supervision and the aggregate sum of money he expends every year.

The County Board re-elected Louis Amundson to the office of Highway Commissioner one day last week, and notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Amundson had served three years on the job, the Board said nothing about an increase in salary, and voted it at the minimum rate, and had the law allowed it to be any lower, it is quite evident that it would have been lowered.

Now this condition of affairs seems hardly right. Mr. Amundson was appointed by the state in the year 1912, and has served the County during the past three years. During that time he has employed all the way from 300 to 400 men on the work thru the County and at no time has there been any labor troubles. Mr. Amundson originated a system of building bridges by day labor which has proved a great saving to the County and has been pronounced by State Engineer Hirst to be the best system that has been found in the state.

During the year 1914 there were approximately $80,000 spent under Mr. Amundson's supervision, and the amount in 1915 will be about the same. The work performed under the supervision of Mr. Amundson has always received the highest praise by the state engineer, and there is no question but what Mr. Amundson has taken advantage of every possible means to inform himself of the best methods of road construction, and that our people have had the services of a man who put his entire mind and best efforts into the work.

In view of these facts it would seem no more than just if the Board should show some appreciation of his efforts, and put their appreciation into some sort of a tangible form so that it could be used in a case of emergency to buy flour and sugar with.

ATWOOD APPOINTED TAX COMMISSIONER

TO ANNEX SERBIA

BULGARIA TO GOVERN NISH AND AUSTRIA TO HAVE PART OF NATION.

KING PETER NEAR CAPTURE

Ruler Carried Out of Kraljevo Only Few Hours Before Germans Entered —French Expect to Effect Junction With Serbs Soon.

London, Nov. 10.—Formal announcement of the annexation of south and southwestern Serbia by Bulgaria is expected at any moment. Messages exchanged between Czar Ferdinand of Bulgaria, Premier Radovoski and the commander of the army that took Nish announce the actual annexation of the conquered territory. It is believed the Teutonic allies plan the dismemberment of Serbia, part to go to Bulgaria, the rest to Austria-Hungary.

Austro-German forces hastening steadily southward in their drive to sweep the Serbs into Greece and Albania have captured Kraljevo, 32 miles northeast of Nish, the last arsenal town in Serbia. With a capture of the city 4,500 Serbs were taken prisoner, including 1,500 in hospitals, according to an official statement issued at Berlin on Monday.

The official statement says the Austro-Germans are now attacking the Serbs south of Kraljevo, which they already hold, and that the Austrians have reached Ivanjica. In the capture of Kraljevo, it was learned, King Peter of Serbia narrowly escaped capture. The sick monarch was carried out of Kraljevo only a few hours before the city fell.

Attacking the Bulgarians on Bulgarian soil south of Strumitsa, an Anglo-French force was repulsed with heavy losses.

Germans, pushing southward from Varvarin, and Bulgarians advancing north toward Nish, have joined forces.

French troops have occupied Kosjak and Babuna heights, commanding Pleistar pass, through which runs the Podgora-Kavadar road, and are expected to effect a junction soon with the Serbian army occupying the northwestern slope of the Babuna range, says a Monastir dispatch to the Main.

Would Form Citizen Force of 400,000 Men—Believes Plan Will Meet Country's Needs.

Washington, Nov. 8.—Hers are the essential features of the administration's military program as set forth in a statement issued on Friday by Secretary of War Garrison:

Creation of a regular army of 141,843 officers and men to cost $127,234,555 annually.

Improvement of the National Guard, consisting of 129,000 officers and men, to cost $10,000,000 annually.

Formation of a citizen army of 400,000 men, to cost $45,000,000 annually. This is to be called the "Continental army."

Acquisition of reserve material, including ordnance and other supplies, to cost $104,223,261, and purchase within four years, by an annual expenditure of $28,051,320.

Development of seacoast fortifications to cost $81,075,000, the annual expenditure being $20,000,000 a year for four years.

Finally, the organization of all the resources of the nation in railroad civilians, including engineers, bridge builders, railroad men, etc., to aid the army in time of war.

The military policy proposed by Mr. Garrison calls for a total appropriation of $1,084,393,243.83 by congress during the next two years under the heading of the army. It will make a total of over $2,000,000,000 called for by the national defense plan for the next five years.

If congress adopts the administration's program the following new organizations will be added to the army:

- Ten regiments of infantry.
- Four regiments of field artillery.
- Fifteen companies of engineers.
- Four aero squadrons.

Washington Warns Britain to Keep Within Law.

BLOCKADE IS INDEFENSIBLE

England Told That America Will No Longer Submit to Trespass Upon Its Rights—Must Not Least Trade.

Washington, Nov. 8.—Solemn warning to Great Britain that the United States will not further submit to the curtailment of its neutral rights, which has been the effect of the allies' blockade of Germany since March 11, is contained in the note to Great Britain made public by the state department.

After declaring that the United States "cannot with complicity suffer for further subordination of its rights and interests," the note serves notice in the following paragraph that Great Britain will be held to the enforcement of the letter of international law:

"The government of the United States desires to impress most earnestly upon his majesty's government that it must insist that the relations between it and his majesty's government be governed, not by a policy of expediency, but by those established rules of international conduct upon which Great Britain in the past has held the United States to account when the latter nation was a belligerent engaged in a struggle for national existence. It is of the highest importance to neutrals not only of the present day, but of the future, that the principles of international right be maintained unimpaired."

Defending Neutral Rights.

That the United States has taken upon itself the task of defending the rights of all neutral nations against the British program of seizing and holding up merchant vessels at will is indicated in this paragraph:

"This task of championing the integrity of neutral rights, which have received the sanction of the civilized world against the lawless conduct of belligerents arising out of the bitterness of the great conflict which is now wasting the countries of Europe, the United States unhesitatingly assumes, and to the accomplishment of that task it will devote its energies, exercising always that impartiality which from the outbreak of the war it has sought to exercise in its relations with the warring nations."

The note covers exhaustively the subject of British interference with American trade since the beginning of the war and declares the so-called blockade of the allies "ineffective, illegal and indefensible." The note was made public by agreement between the state department and the British foreign office and carries with it a voluminous appendix giving the text of American naval instructions issued in 1862 and a summary and table showing hundreds of vessels detained by British authorities since the present war began.

Deals With Contraband Question.

The note itself is divided into thirty-five points, dealing with all phases of the contraband question, seizure and detection, and announces that a separate communication will be sent soon dealing particularly with the "propriety and right of the British government to include in their list of contraband of war certain articles which have been so included."

The note is dated October 21 and acknowledges the British notes of January 7, February 10, June 22, July 23, two on July 31, August 13 and the note verbale of August 6, all relating to restrictions upon American commerce.

After an argument on law and facts, Secretary Lansing in conclusion says:

"I believe it has been conclusively shown that the methods sought to be employed by Great Britain to obtain and use evidence of enemy destination of cargoes bound for neutral ports and to impose a contraband character upon such cargoes are without justification; that the blockade, upon which such methods are partly founded, is ineffective, illegal and indefensible; that the judicial procedure offered as a means of reparation for an international injury is inherently defective for the purpose; and that in many cases jurisdiction is asserted in violation of the law of nations."

U. S. Cannot Submit.

The United States, therefore, cannot submit to the curtailment of its neutral rights by these measures, which are admittedly retaliatory, and therefore illegal, in conception and in nature and intended to punish the enemies of Great Britain for alleged illegalities on their part. The United States might not be in a position to object to them if its interests and the interests of all neutrals were unaffected by them, but, being affected, it cannot with complicity suffer further subordination of its rights and interests to the plea that the exceptional geographic position of the enemies of Great Britain requires or justifies oppressive and illegal practices."

Denies British Contentions.

In answer to the British contention that conditions relating to the size and seaworthiness of modern carriers of commerce justify bringing vessels into port for search, the report of a board of United States naval experts states that the blockade, upon which such methods are partly founded, is ineffective, illegal and indefensible; that the judicial procedure offered as a means of reparation for an international injury is inherently defective for the purpose; and that in many cases jurisdiction is asserted in violation of the law of nations."

HANDLING THE PEA HAY CROP.

Best Time for Cutting is When First Yellow Pods Are Seen—Leaves Contain Much Nutriment.

Peas should be cut for hay when the first yellow pods are seen. Cut later too many of the leaves are lost, and as they contain a great deal of nutriment, the vines should be cut when the leaves will not shatter off;

when the vines will not be woody and coarse after they are dry and cured.

Lucky in Picking Calf.

The man who learns to pick a future big producer from the calf lot is lucky. He is the man who will be able to build up his dairy herd along right lines at small expense.

Foundation of Farming.

Live stock is the foundation of permanently successful farming today, as it has always been.

Grain Intended for Seed.

All grain intended for seed should be cleaned and graded, in order to retain only the strong kernels, is cited, in which it is stated that it is not necessary to "remove every package of a ship's cargo to establish the character and nature of her trade," that the facilities for boarding and inspection of modern ships are in fact greater than in former times, and that to permit ships to be taken into port "would be a direct hit to the belligerents concerned in that it would release a belligerent vessel overhauling the neutral from its duty of search and set it free for further belligerent operations."

Certain points deal with new procedure in the prize courts, the effect of which the United States complains is "to subject traders to risk of loss, delay and expense so great and so burdensome as to practically destroy much of the export trade of the United States to neutral countries of Europe."

Maintains Right of Sale.

Whatever may be the conjectural conclusions drawn from trade statistics, the United States maintains the right to sell goods into the general stock of a neutral country, and denounces as illegal and unenforceable any attempt of a belligerent to interfere with that right on the ground that it suspects that the previous supply of such goods in the neutral country, which the imports renew or replace, has been sold to an enemy.

"That is a matter with which the neutral vendor has no concern and which can do no way affect his rights and interests. Moreover, even if goods listed as conditional contraband are destined to an enemy country through a neutral, that fact is not in itself sufficient to justify their seizure."

In view of these considerations the United States announces that it has no other course but "to contest seizures of vessels at sea upon conjectural suspicion and the practice of bringing them into port for the purpose of obtaining evidence, for the purpose of justifying prize proceedings, of the carriage of contraband or of breeches of the order in council of March 11, relying upon the regard of the British government for the principles of justice so frequently and uniformly manifested prior to the present war, this government anticipates that the British government will instruct their officers to refrain from these vexatious and illegal practices."

Mistakes Neutral Trade.

After more than six months application of the blockade order, the note says the experience of American citizens has convinced the government of the United States that Great Britain has been unsuccessful in her efforts to distinguish between enemy and neutral trade.

"The government of the United States has viewed with surprise and concern," the note adds, "the attempt of his majesty's government to confine upon the British prize court's jurisdiction by this illegal exercise of force in order that these courts may apply to vessels and cargoes of neutral nationalities, seized on both high seas, municipal laws and orders which can only rightfully be enforceable within the territorial waters of Great Britain, or against vessels of British nationality when on the high seas."

"The United States government feels that it cannot reasonably be expected to advise its citizens to seek redress before tribunals which are, in its opinion, authorized by the restricted application of International law to grant reparation, nor to restrain from presenting their claims directly to the British government through diplomatic channels."

He was graduated from Ripon college in 1872, and from the University of Wisconsin law school in 1878. He then went to Aberdeen, S. D., where he practiced law until 1881, when he came to Milwaukee.

COUNTYS TO KEEP UP ROADS

Attorney General Hules Green County Can Not Appropriate Money for Bridge Party in Illinois.

Madison.—The attorney general advised District Attorney A. W. Grady of Port Washington, Ozaukee county, that counties must, under the present law, maintain state aid highways built in fourth class cities. The last legislature amended the old highway law to provide that counties should not be required to maintain state aid highways in villages, and it was thought that the amendment also included cities of the fourth class as well as villages, thus reducing the county from the expense. The attorney general said that the legislature probably intended to amend the law to include fourth class cities as well as villages, but had failed to do so.

The attorney general advised District Attorney Samuel Blum of Monroe, Green county, that neither the county nor the town of Spring Grove can lawfully appropriate money for the construction of a new bridge over Sugar river on the highway running east and west and party in Wisconsin and partly in Illinois.

The attorney general said that under the Wharton law public money could be used only in building bridges wholly on soil within the state.

Madison.—The state board of control will soon consider plans for equipping the state charitable and penal institutions with automatic sprinklers or other protection against fire in those institutions, as contemplated under a law passed by the last legislature appropriating $25,000 for such purpose. The amount of money appropriated will go far toward installing sprinkler systems in the institutions, the board believes, but it will be sufficient to make a start in that direction and also to keep the buildings supplied with hand fire extinguishers, thus minimizing the hazard to life and property.

England Told That America Will No Longer Submit to Trespass Upon Its Rights—Must Not Make Trade.

London, Nov. 8.—Formal announcement of the annexation of south and southwestern Serbia by Bulgaria is expected at any moment. Messages exchanged between Czar Ferdinand of Bulgaria, Premier Radostov and the commander of the army that took Nish announce the actual annexation of the conquered territory. It is believed the Teutonic allies plan the dismemberment of Serbia, part to go to Bulgaria, the rest to Austria-Hungary.

Austro-German forces heading steadily southward in their drive to sweep the Serbs into Greece and Albania have captured Krusevac, 32 miles northeast of Nish, the last arsenal town in Serbia. With a capture of the city 4,500 Serbs were taken prisoner, including 1,500 in hospitals, according to an official statement issued at Berlin on Monday.

The official statement says the Austro-Germans are now attacking the Serbs south of Krusevac, which they already hold, and that the Austrians have reached Ivanjica. In the capture of Krusevac only a few hours before the king Peter narrowly escaped capture. The sick monarch was carried out of Krusevac only a few hours before the city was taken.

Attacking the Bulgarians on Bulgarian soil south of Krusevac, an Anglo-French force was repulsed with heavy losses.

Germany, pushing southward from Varvarin, and Bulgarians, advancing north toward Nish, have joined forces. French troops have occupied Kosice and Lubina heights, commanding Plitvicka pass, through which runs the Padpole-Kavarno road, and are expected to effect a junction soon with the Serbian army occupying the northwestern slope of the Babuna range, near Monastir, dispatch to the ministry of foreign affairs.

THE GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED STATES DESIRES TO IMPRESS MOST EARNESTLY UPON HIS MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT THAT IT MUST LAIST THAT THE RELATIONS BETWEEN IT AND HIS MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT BE GOVERNED, NOT BY A POLICY OF EXPEDIENCY, BUT BY THOSE ESTABLISHED RULES OF INTERNATIONAL CONDUCT UPON WHICH GREAT BRITAIN IN THE PAST HAS HELD THE UNITED STATES TO ACCOUNT WHEN THE LATTER NATION WAS A BELLIGERENT ENEMY.

After declaring that the United States "cannot with complacency suffer further subordination of its rights and interests," the note serves notice in the following paragraph that Great Britain will be held to the enforcement of the letter of international law:

"The government of the United States desires to impress most earnestly upon his majesty's government that it must laist that the relations between it and his majesty's government be governed, not by a policy of expediency, but by those established rules of international conduct upon which great britain in the past has held the united states to account when the latter nation was a belligerent enemy.

The fire department had been endeavoring for three months to forestall such a tragedy and had repeatedly warned the owners of the building that they must provide more fire escapes.

The building was said to have been condemned. Absence of fire escapes was asserted to be responsible for the loss of life.

Of the known dead eight were girls and women. The fire drove before it the terrified girls and men, who first had sought to reach the stairs. It bordered them closer and closer to the walls and closer and closer to the windows, which instantly had been jammed.

Many of the injured girls received their hurts when driven by the flames, they sprang from window ledges and the fire escape. The dead were found in the building and on the fire escape, which almost at once had become a huge grill on which unfortunate were roasted to death. How the fire started has not been determined.

DEALS WITH CONTRABAND QUESTION.

The note covers exhaustively the subject of British interference with American trade since the beginning of the war and declares the so-called blockade of the allies "ineffective, illegal and indefensible." The note was made public by agreement between the state department and the British foreign office and carried with it a voluminous appendix giving the text of American naval instructions issued in 1862 and a summary and table showing hundreds of vessels detained by British authorities since the present war began.

"The United States government feels that it cannot reasonably be expected to advise its citizens to seek redress before tribunals which are, in its opinion, authorized by the unrestricted application of international law.

The note is dated October 21 and acknowledges the British notes of January 7, February 10, June 22, July 23, two on July 31, August 13 and the note verbale of August 6, all relating to restrictions upon American commerce.

After an argument on law and facts, Secretary Lansing in conclusion says:

SYNOPSIS

Cazalot, on the steamer Kaiser Fritz, seaward bound from Australia, comes out in his sleep that Henry Craven, who ten years before had ruined his father and mother, has been staying at the hotel Toy's, who shares the stateroom with him, knows Craven and also Blanche Macmillan, the former helped and played with. When the steamer comes up to land at Southampton Toy's reads that Craven has been murdered and calls Cazalot, who has been seeing a great deal of doing a little amateur detective work on the case himself. In the train to town they stop at a station where they are invited at Cazalot's old home. Toy's hears from Cazalot that Scrutton, who had been Cazalot's friend and the neophyte for Craven's disappearance, has been found in prison. Cazalot goes down the river and meets Blanche Toy, also going to see her. She has been married since he doesn't believe the old boy is guilty. He says he will go to see his old friend Cazalot and Blanche go to Cazalot's old home and meet Mr. Drinkwater of Scotland, who is the English attaché to the International Commission which committed shows him a secret passage he had in his box and locks the way through it. The murderer suggests finger prints on the window frame found in the secret passage, which Cazalot, after the murderer and success in securing a trial of Cazalot's hand.

Cazalot excused himself with deck slops. He had a full morning in front of him. He was going to see Miss Macmillan's brother, son of the late head of his father's old firm of solicitors, and now one of the partners, to get them either to take up Scrutton's case themselves, or else to recommend a firm, perhaps more accustomed to criminal practice. Cazalot was always apt to be elaborate in the first person singular, either in the past or in the future tense; but he was more so than usual in explaining his considered intentions in this matter, that lay so very near his heart.

"Going to see Scrutton, too?" said Toy.

"Not necessarily," was the short reply. But it also was elaborated by Cazalot on a moment's consideration. The fact was that he wanted first to know if it were not possible, by the intervention of a really influential lawyer, to obtain the prisoner's immediate release, at any rate on bail. If impossible, he might hesitate to force himself on Scrutton in the prison, but he would see.

"It's a perfect scandal that he should be there at all," said Cazalot, as he rose first and ushered Toy out into the lounge. "Only think! our old gardener saw him run out of the drive at half past seven, when the gong went, when the real murderer must have been shivering in the Michael-Angelo cupboard, wondering where the devil he was ever going to get out again."

"Then you think old man Craven—begging his poor pardon—was getting out some cigars when the man, whoever he was, came in and knocked him on the head?"

Cazalot nodded vigorously. "That's the likeliest thing of all," he cried. "Then the going went—there may even have come a knock at the door—and there was that cupboard standing open at his elbow!"

"With a hole in the floor that might have been made for him?" asked Toy.

"Did you say you were there two days?" Toy was cutting his cigar as though it were a corn.

"Two whole days, and we'd had a night in the Bay of Naples just before."

"Well, it's a wonderful yarn!" exclaimed Hilton Toy, and he lighted the cigar that Cazalot had given him.

"Which you mean to prevent?"

"If only I can! I more or less promised not to talk, however, and I'm sure you won't. You know so much already, you may just as well know the rest this week as well as next, if you don't mind keeping it to yourself."

Nobody could have minded this particular embargo less than Hilton Toy. He saw Cazalot off with a smile that was as yet merely cordial, and not unfriendly until he had time to recall Miss Blanche's part in the strange affair of the previous afternoon.

Say, weren't they rather intimate, those two, even if they had known each other all their lives? He had it from Blanche (with her second refusal) that she was not, and never had been, engaged. And a fellow who only wrote to her once in a year—still, they must have been darned intimate, and this funny affair would bring them together again quicker than anything.

Say, what a funny affair it was when you came to think of it! Funny all through, it now struck Toy's, beginning on board ship with that dream of Cazalot's about the murdered man, leading to all that talk of the old grievance against him, and culminating in his actually finding the implements of the crime in his inspired efforts to save the man of whose innocence he was so positive. The season so far verifies the weather predictions of the Indians who occasionally visit the Mesa Verde national park in southwestern Colorado for trading purposes, but who never stay an hour longer than is necessary, because of their dread of the "little people" who they believe still inhabit, in spirit form, the prehistoric cliff dwellings that have made the Mesa Verde. Deer are more frequently seen than for years. Rabbits and hares are so numerous one can scarcely go about without seeing them in large numbers. Coyotes and mountain lions are also unusually plentiful, which may be explained by the abundance of the small game on which they live.

Toy felt one himself as he picked his way through St. James' square. If it had not been just after lunch, he would have gone straight and had a cocktail, for of course he knew the only place for them. What he did was to blue round out of the square, and to obtain for the asking, at another old haunt, on Cockspur street, the latest little time-table of continental trains. This he carried, not on foot but in a taxi, to the Savoy Hotel, where he kept him busy in his own room for the best part of another hour. But by that time Hilton Toy looked more than an hour older than on sitting down at his writing-table with pen, paper, and the little book of trains; he looked horrified, he looked distressed, and yet he looked crafty, determined and immensely alive. He proceeded, however, to take some of the life out of himself, and to add still more to his apparent age, by repairing for more inward light to Turkish bath.

Now the only Turkish bath, according to Hilton Toy's sense of what exclusive code, was not even a hundred yards from Cavalier's hotel; and there the visitor of the morning again presented himself before the afternoon; now merely a little wort, as a man who had sunk his little capital.

At least, so far as marrying Elsie was concerned, her father would never consent. Jim knew Jack Dale too well to hope for that. But if the trip succeeded Jim could afford to bear the old man's scowly, and Elsie had the first opportunity, to keep his hold on her.

He got up and dressed. He was just about to leave the room when the young man entered. He surveyed Jim with a grimmer smile than before.

"You haven't shaved off your beard, he said.

"No," said Jim thoughtfully. "It looks—more manly, I think."

The other looked at him in contempt. It penetrated the man's skin. Jim winced. It was the first moment of self-realization in many a year.

"Why have you done all this for me?" he asked, looking at the other curiously. "Do you know, I believe I believe you are in love with Elsie yourself."

"Miss Dale from you, please," replied the other. "Yes, I am in love with her, if you wish to know. And if I hadn't found you I think she would have married me."

"Then why did you find me?" insisted Jim.

The other choked down an expletive, if "you're ready," said he coldly, "we'll start right away."

Jim went out with him. And now, surveyed by the curious inhabitants of the little settlement, the target of their sneering glances, Jim felt suddenly more ashamed than he had ever felt before in all his life. And for the first time he really understood the depths of his degradation.

He had been a worthless brachomber, while she had waited for him, believed in him. He was utterly worthless. He could not degrade that pure life to the level of his own. He had thought of nothing but the Dale millions, nothing at all of the love that had been true to him.

Unconsciously he held his head higher and hung back the scornful gestures, the looks, the thinly veiled tears. They should learn some day that there was spark of manhood in him which would kindle the old fires.

He knew that his past was utterly dead. And so, walking at the side of his companion, he boarded the boat.

There was a delay, a brief delay. The young man turned to him and said:

"Remember, Bennett, my life is sealed forever. You have your own future and hers to make or mar. I know her love for you, and that is why I shall remain silent. Can you honor it? Promise me that from this day forward you will strive with might and main to be worthy of her."

"I promise," answered Jim humbly, and the man at his side looked at him strangely. This seemed to be a new man—he had known nothing of him.

Along the dock came a white-robed figure, tripping gladly. Jim knew her at once. All his heart went out to her. Elsie had not changed a bit during these three years, except that there was more of the woman in her pose, her thoughtful eyes, and just as much of the happy girl in her smiling face.

"Any of you men know a fellow named Jim Bennett?" he inquired.

The man nearest Jim judged him laconically; the rest did not even shift their eyes from the far horizon.

"But you've just come back from there!" Cazalot looked no worse than ever.

"No, sir, I missed Rome out; that was my mistake, and here's this situation been developing behind my back."

"What situation?"

"Oh, why, it wouldn't interest you! But I've got to go down to Rome, I know I like it or not, and I don't like it any, because I don't have any friends there. And that's what I'm doing right here. I was wondering if you'd do something for me, Cazalot."

"If I can," said Cazalot, with pleasure.

"But his smiles were gone.

"I was wondering if you'd give me an introduction to those friends of yours in Rome!"

"That's just the difficulty," said Ayler.

"I guess it's nothing. Knife too sharp; please don't worry, Captain Ayler. I was going to say I only got out at Genoa, and they couldn't give me a room to myself; that's how I saw so much of him."

It was Toy's third and separate independent attempt to introduce the name and fame of Cazalot as a natural topic of conversation. Twice his host had listened with adamantine politeness; this time he was enjoying quite the second-best liqueur brandy to his heart's content.

"What's that?"

"Oh, it's a perfect scandal that he should be there at all," said Cazalot.

"Did you say you were there two days?" Toy was cutting his cigar as though it were a corn.

"Two whole days, and we'd had a night in the Bay of Naples just before."

"Well, it's a wonderful yarn!" exclaimed Hilton Toy, and he lighted the cigar that Cazalot had given him.

"Which you mean to prevent?"

"If only I can! I more or less promised not to talk, however, and I'm sure you won't. You know so much already, you may just as well know the rest this week as well as next, if you don't mind keeping it to yourself."

Nobody could have minded this particular embargo less than Hilton Toy. He saw Cazalot off with a smile that was as yet merely cordial, and not unfriendly until he had time to recall Miss Blanche's part in the strange affair of the previous afternoon.

Say, weren't they rather intimate, those two, even if they had known each other all their lives? He had it from Blanche (with her second refusal) that she was not, and never had been, engaged. And a fellow who only wrote to her once in a year—still, they must have been darned intimate, and this funny affair would bring them together again quicker than anything.

Say, what a funny affair it was when you came to think of it! Funny all through, it now struck Toy's, beginning on board ship with that dream of Cazalot's about the murdered man, leading to all that talk of the old grievance against him, and culminating in his actually finding the implements of the crime in his inspired efforts to save the man of whose innocence he was so positive. STYLES ARE VARIED

REALLY NOTHING DEFINITE HAS BEEN ARRIVED AT.

Skirt of Last Autumn, However, May Be Said to Be Definitely Shelved —Quirinus Bodice Will Be Soon for Many.

There is no settlement of the fashion question yet. Happily, the various styles which were brought over for our selection are swinging from one silhouette to another like a pendulum. There is reason to be happy about it, because it spells a certain degree of safety for the woman who knows what she wants and can find it in the heterogeneous assortment that is offered.

Some of the best American designers are insisting on the moderately narrow skirt, but the skirt of last autumn is definitely done for and must be shelved. The wide tonic over the skinny underskirt belongs to a day that is done. The coats of last autumn are not as hopeless as the skirts and bodices, but possibly it is easier to get a new suit than an old skirt.

However, no one can lay a finger on any one fashion and say it is the ruling one. There seems still to be uncertainty as regards the best fashion to choose for an established winter style.

The cutout bodice is one of the revived fashions that women greet with approval. It saves one the need of worry about the waist line. No matter what the new corsage are unable to do to that has hardened into stubbornness, the medieval bodice, made of any cloth, hides a thick line and leaves the onlooker ignorant of the size of the waist beneath.

The metal cloth is preferred by Jenny for these bodices and she uses them over voluminous skirts of tubo or lace. Sometimes the lace is of metal over a taffeta foundation, and the bodice is of heavily brocaded satin or velvet. Blue predominates as a color. Black is rarely used in this kind of a frock, although Preston has sent over a model with a white tulip skirt embroidered in rhinestones that has a bodice of black plush. This has straight lines at the side and the medieval decolletage, but it does not

Number of Passengers, Some of Them Wounded, Reach Bizerte—Vessel Sailed From Genoa for New York—482 Persons on Board.

Rome, Nov. 11.—The Italian steamer Ancona, bound from Genoa for New York, has been sunk in the Mediterranean by a submarine flying the Austrian flag.

The Ancona had on board 83 first cabin passengers, 60 in the second cabin, and 339 in the steerage. Prince Cesare Zentini was aboard the Ancona. Few details have been received here concerning the sinking of the ship. News of the loss of the vessel caused the greatest anxiety in Rome.

Two hundred and seventy survivors have been landed at Bizerte, on the North African coast. Some of them were severely wounded. About 318 passengers and members of the crew have been lost.

The Ancona was of 8,210 tons. She was a twin screw steamer with two decks and a spar deck and fitted with wireless.

New York, Nov. 11.—The Italian liner Ancona left New York for Genoa on Oct. 17 carrying a large number of Italian revolutionists. She arrived at Genoa on October 29. Captain Masiello was in command on this voyage.

Capt. Antonio Rustini, marine superintendent for the Italian line, said that no word had been received in the New York office regarding the sinking of the vessel.

White Hartfield, general manager of the Italian line, characterized the sinking of the Ancona as "an unnecessary crime" and "absolute murder."

The model is of cream-colored lace with a plenum of lace coming to a point on each side. The waist is made of lace laid in plait. The shoulder straps are of blue velvet and ribbons hold the waist in place.

A rose is placed in the front of the waist where the shoulder straps are sewn. A satin girdle completes the costume.

SYNOPSIS.

Cazalet, on the steamer Kaiser Fritz, homeward bound from Australia, criticizes his life. He has lost his fortune, his father is dead, and his mother is dead. Hilton Toye, who shared the starboard cabin with him, is a man of means. Mme. Maynard, a former neighbor and playmate, when the daily papers came out, was shocked to find that Cazalet's name had been mentioned and called Cazalet's dead second sight. He thinks of his past life, and of the trouble he is in the same himself. In the train to town they discuss the murder, which was committed at Cazalet's hotel. Cazalet's friend, Captain Aylmer, who had been Cazalet's friend and the sergeant for Cazalet's debauchery, has been sent to prison and is now in jail. Toye, down the river, and Cazalet, too, are in jail. He doesn't believe the old chisel is guilty. He goes to see the captain, and finds him in the same boat. The captain, however, has been promoted to Major Brinkwater of Scott's Yard. Cazalet uses with Brinkwater the same language he used with Captain Aylmer, and Brinkwater commends him. Shows him a secret passage through the walls, and leads the way through it. In the secret room, Cazalet finds the master, Augustus Blanche, on the weapon, placed in the secret room, the means of trapping the murderer, and the means to set aside a prima donna.

Cazalet excused himself with declaration. He had a full morning in front of him. He was going to see Miss Maynard's brother, son of the late head of his father's old firm of solicitors, and now one of the partners, to get them either to take up Scruton's case themselves, or else to recommend a firm, perhaps more accustomed to criminal practice. Cazalet was always apt to elaborate in the first person singular, either in the past or in the future tense; but he was more so than usual in explaining his constitutional intentions. In this matter that lay so very near his heart.

"Going to see Scruton, too?" said Toye.

"Not necessarily," was the short reply. But it also was elaborated by Cazalet on a moment's consideration. The fact was that he wanted first to know if it were not possible, by the intervention of a really influential lawyer, to obtain the prisoner's immediate release, at any rate on bail. If impossible, he might hesitate to force himself on Scruton in the prison, but he would see.

"It's a perfect scandal that he should be there at all," said Cazalet, as he rose first and ushered Toye out into the lounge. "Only think: our old comrade saw him run out of the drive at half past seven, when the gong went, when the real murderer must have been slinking in the Michaelangelo cupboard, wondering how the devil he was ever going to get out again."

Cazalet nodded vigorously. "That's the likeliest thing of all," he cried. "Then the gong went—there may even have come a knock at the door—and there was that cupboard standing open at his elbow."

"With a hole in the floor that might have been made for him!"

"As it happens, yes; he'd search every inch like a rat in a trap, you see; and there it was as I left it twenty years before."

"Well, it's a wonderful yarn," exclaimed Hilton Toye, and he lighted the cigar that Cazalet had given him.

"I think it may be though one if the police ever own how they made their find," agreed Cazalet, laughing and looking at his watch. Toye had never heard him laugh so often. "By the way, Brinkwater doesn't want any of all this to come out until he's dragged his man before the bank again."

"Which you mean to prevent?"

"If only I can! I'm more less promised not to talk, however, and I'm sure you won't. You know so much already, you may just as well know the rest this week as next. If you don't mind keeping it to yourself."

Nobody could have minded this particular embargo less than Hilton Toye. He saw Cazalet off with a smile that was as yet merely puzzled, and not unfriendly until he had time to recall Miss Blanche's part in the strange affair of the previous afternoon.

SAYS ACTION IS NOT INSTANT

Gravitation, as Electrical Phenomenon, Explained by Scientists of Worldwide Fame.

Gravitation is an electrical phenomenon and does not act instantly across space, but is transmitted with the velocity of light, thus coming from the sun to the earth in eight minutes.

So says Prof. Thomas Jefferson Jackson See, famous astronomer, in his 600-word memoir entitled: "Electro-dynamic Theory of Magnetism and of Universal Gravitation: Discovery of the Cause of Gravitation. With Proof That This Fundamental Force of Nature Is Propagated With the Velocity of Light." He claims to have discovered the secret of gravitation and has put the information in the hands of the Royal Society of London. Professor See holds that gravitation is due to elementary currents of electricity circulating around atoms of matter. Ampere, the celebrated French scientist, discovered in 1820 that two parallel currents of electricity flowing in opposite directions repel. Following the lines first taken by Ampere, Professor See has worked out his theory of gravitation.

Mesa Verde Prophets.

The season so far verifies the weather predictions of the Indians who occasionally visit the Mesa Verde national park in southwestern Colorado for trading purposes, but who never stay an hour longer than is necessary, because of their dread of the "little people" who they believe still inhabit, in spirit form, the prehistoric cliff dwellings that have made the Mancos valley famous the world over.

Last fall the mesa verde prairie dogs deserted their villages for new ones, his Italy overland. Rather a good idea, I thought, especially as he said he had friends in Rome; but we never heard of 'em beforehand, and I should have let the whole thing strike me a bit sooner if I'd been Cazalet. Soon enough to take a handbag and a toothbrush, eh? And I don't think I should have run it quite so fine at Genoa, either. But there are rum birds in this world, and always will be!"

Toye felt one himself as he picked his way through St. James' square. If it had not been just after lunch, he would have gone straight and had a cocktail, for of course he knew the only place for them. What he did was to sit round out of the square, and to obtain for the asking, at another old haunt, on Cockspur street, the latest little time-table of continental trains. This he carried, not on foot but in a taxi, to the Savoy Hotel, where it kept him busy in his own room for the best part of another hour. But by that time Hilton Toye looked more than an hour older than on sitting down at his writing-table with pencil, paper and the little book of trains; he looked horrified, he looked distressed, and yet he looked crafty, determined and immensely alive. He proceeded, however, to take some of the life out of himself, and to add still more to his apparent age, by repairing to his Turkish bath.

"Say, waiter, what have you done with the menu that was in that toast-rack?" There was something on it that we rather wanted to keep."

"I thought there was, sir," said the English waiter at that admirable hotel.

Toye, however, prepared to talk to him like an American uncle of Dutch extraction.

"You thought that, and you took it away?"

"Not at all, sir. I happened to observe the other gentleman put the menu in his pocket, behind your back as you were getting up, because I passed a remark about it to the head waiter at the time!"

CHAPTER IX.

Fair Warning.

It was much more than a map of the metropolis that Toye carried in his able head. He knew the right places for the right things. He gazed critically at his boots. He was not so dead sure that he had struck the only man for boots. There had been a young fellow aboard the Kaiser Fritz, quite a little bit of a military blood, who had come ashore in a pair of cloth tops that had rather unsettled Mr. Toye's mind just on that one point.

Captain Aylmer had said he would like to have Toye see his club any time he was passing and cared to look in for lunch. He had said so as though he would like it a great deal, and suddenly Toye had a mind to take him at his word right now. The idea began with those boots with cloth tops, but that was not all there was to it; there was something else that had been at the back of Toye's mind all along, and now took charge on that account.

Cazalet was not in; his friend would wait, and in fact waited over an hour in the little lounge. An evening paper was offered to him; he took it listlessly, scarcely looked at it at first, then tore it in his anxiety to find something he had quite forgotten—from the newspaper end. But he was waiting as stoically as before when Cazalet arrived in tremendous spirits.

"Stop and dine!" he cried out at once.

"Sorry I can't; got to go and see somebody," said Hilton Toye.

"Then you must have a drink."

"No, I thank you," said Toye, with the decisive courtesy of a total abstainer.

"You look as if you wanted one; you don't look a bit fit," said Cazalet, most kindly.

"Nor am I, sir!" exclaimed Toye.

"I guess London's no place for me in the fall. Just as well, too, I judge, since I've got to light out again straight away."

"You haven't?"

"Yes, sir, this very night. That's the worst of a business that takes you to all the capitals of Europe in turn. It takes you so long to fit around that you never know when you've got to start in again."

"Which capital is it this time?" said Cazalet. His exuberant geniality had been dashed very visibly for the moment. But already his high spirits were reassured themselves; indeed, a cynic with an ear might have caught the note of sudden consolation in the question that Cazalet asked so briskly.

"Got to go down to Rome," said Toye, watching the effect of his words.

"But you've just come back from there!" Cazalet looked no worse than puffed.

"No, sir, I missed Rome out; that was my mistake, and here's this situation been developing behind my back."

"What situation?"

"Oh, why, it wouldn't interest you! But I've got to go down to Rome, whether I like it or not, and I don't like it any, because I don't have any friends there. And that's what I'm doing right here. I was wondering if you'd do something for me, Cazalet!"

"If I can," said Cazalet, with pleasure.

"I was wondering if you'd give me an introduction to these friends of yours in Rome!"

There was a little pause, and Cazalet's tongue just showed between his lips, moistening them. It was at that moment the only touch of color in his face.

"I'm Jim Bennett," he answered doggedly.

"Are you Jim Bennett or are you lying?" he demanded, in crisp, nervous accents.

For an instant Jim felt the resentment that would come to any normal man at such treatment; but then he remembered that he had left his manhood behind him at the whisky bar in Tam-tam town.

"I'm Jim Bennett," he answered doggedly.

The other breathed hard. "Where do you come from?" he demanded. "I must have proofs of what you say. Who is the woman to whom you are engaged?"

You mean Miss Dale, I suppose," drawled Jim, and the other let his hands drop from his shoulders and stared at him hopelessly.

"Did I tell you I'd any friends there?"

The sound of his voice was perhaps less hoarse than puzzled. Toye made himself chuckle as he sat looking up out of somber eyes.

"Well, if you didn't," said he, "I guess I must have dreamed it."

The plum is among the earliest known fruits. Thebes, Memphis and Damascus were noted in the early centuries for the great number of their plum trees. Plum trees grow wild in Asia, America and the south of Europe, and from these the large variety of domestic plums which we now enjoy have been cultivated.

Skirt of Last Autumn, However, May Be Said to Be Definitely Shelved—Crausse Bodice Will Be a Bon for Many.

There is no settlement of the fashion question yet. Happily, the various styles which were brought over for our selection are swinging from one silhouette to another like a pendulum. There is reason to be happy about it, because it spares certain degree of safety for the woman who knows what she wants and can find it in the heterogeneous assortment that is offered.

Hat and Coiffure Styles.

White Felt Headgear Likely to Be the Favorite of the Young Generation—Bead Trimmings.

The younger generation will find the hat of white felt, trimmed with a bow of ribbon or a band and tufts of beads, usually becoming, while their elders will wear the toupee or sailor of felt.

Speaking of bead trimmings, nine out of ten hats have small porcelain beads used in some form or other to adorn the brims or crowns. There are borders in conventional designs of one, two or three color combinations; tassels and cords formed of beads; head fringes and head encrusted bands worn in true American-Indian style.

The broad-brimmed sailor hat brought about a change in the arrangement of our fashions. It can no longer be drawn back, smooth and waveless, as it was for the summer hats, but must be wavy and bouser at the sides.

The proper way to wear the sailor is tipped over one side, and this means that there must be softening strands of hair pulled out at the sides.

"I promise," answered Jim humbly, and the man at his side looked at him strangely. This seemed to be a new man—he had known nothing of him.

Along the deck came a white-robed figure, tripping gladly. Jim knew her at once. All his heart went out to her. Elle had not changed a bit during those three years, except that there was more of the woman in her pose, her thoughtful eyes, and just as much of the happy girl in her smiling face.

He remembered it when the monthly vessel arrived. He expected that it would carry a letter for him. No letter had been at the post office, and yet, when Jim looked in, he saw a young, athletic American, neatly dressed, with sun helmet and blue glasses, approaching him, he was sure that he had come upon business concerning Elle.

Jim looked up lazily from among the little group of fellow loafers, and wondered how any man could find the energy to walk at that gait in such a sun. The young man drew up to the group and stopped.

"Any of you men know a fellow named Jim Bennett?" he inquired.

The man nearest Jim nudged him lazily; the rest did not even shift their eyes from the far horizon.

"I'm Jim Bennett," said Jim, rising. He saw the astonishment upon the young man's face.

"Will you please come over here?" asked the stranger.

He led him about fifty yards away, out of the hearing of the others. He might have saved himself the trouble, for those who were not asleep in the shade had already forgotten Jim's existence. When they stood together upon the sand the young man took Jim by the shoulders and swung him round, facing him.

"Are you Jim Bennett or are you lying?" he demanded, in crisp, nervous accents.

For an instant Jim felt the resentment that would come to any normal man at such treatment; but then he remembered that he had left his manhood behind him at the whisky bar in Tam-tam town.

NEWS NOTES FROM NEARBY PLACES

A. F. Bryan of Stevens Point received a $5 cash prize last week from "Folld and Stream," a sportsman publication, for having caught the largest large mouth black bass in the central states. The prize fish was caught in Big Lake, north of Cobolt some time in September. It weighed 84 pounds, was 24 inch long and 15 inches in girth.

Waukeha, Wis.—Edward Root, a well known resident of Waukeha, met a tragic death at Columbus last week. He was employed as engineer for the Federal Construction Company of this city on a job of highway improvement. He had charge of a steam roller and used gasoline to light the fires. An explosion occurred and Mr. Root was caught by flame, his clothing being literally burned off his body. He died at the age of 51 years and is survived by his wife.

Plattefield Sun.—At Dianeck Monday, while shooting in the school of Byron Brown, with Sidney Darling of Wild Rose, Albert Vilbaum, a young man residing below Dianeck and used gasoline to light the fires. An explosion occurred and Mr. Root was caught by flame, his clothing being literally burned off his body. He died at the age of 51 years and is survived by his wife.

Plattefield Sun.—One of the biggest and most valuable of stock was ever made from Plattefield was made on Friday when Pratt & Matthews sold their herd which have been turning on sheep and goats in the drainage ditch to Frank & John of Nebrak, Keeler and W. Atwater.

Several months ago Messrs. Pratt & Matthews purchased 450 head of cattle from Illinois and put them out to pasture. When they went out the average was about 720 lbs. each and when they sold them they averaged 1195 lbs. each, and they received 6½ cents a pound, realizing the neat sum of $3,661 for the two carloads.

Necessitated by the election of Hon. Paul D. Hartung, the United States senator and his consequent attention to national legislative duties at Washington, a consolidation of the law firms of Huston & Broth, Martineau and Huston & Huston, Fond du Lac, has been effected. The law firms will hereafter practice under one name, Huston & Huston, in both cities. At Fond du Lac, Dr. A. Huston will remain in charge, while at Mayville, H. J. and G. B. Huston, having removed from Fond du Lac, Senator Huston will act as counsel for both offices and be in active practice during congressional intervals.

Wesley State Center.—G. W. Conroy, W. J. Cisik and A. E. Taylor, the men who are making the soil survey of Wood county, were here Tuesday with Thos. Rice, who is the government inspector for this district. Mr. Rice was checking up and inspecting the work done on the survey in this county. The boys are just finishing up the surveys at Platteville which completes the field work for the county. Many thousands of square miles will be analyzed this winter and the maps will be drawn from the field notes. It will probably be a year before the maps will be in circulation. There will also be bulletins published covering the work done in Wood county and describing the different kinds of soil found.

Nellsville Times.—D. S. Livermore of Fairchild was arrested last week by state authorities charged with collecting state bounties on wolves that were never killed, and paid a fine of $600, $100 of which of the separate fines. More arrests are to come as Livermore testified that he paid town chairman $5 for each certificate issued, thus retaining $5 on each bounty for himself. Edward Waller and Louis Pettis, also of Fairchild, were fined $20 each on three counts for the same offense. The state game warden's office has been working on many such cases lately as it is stated that the state has been defrauded out of almost half million dollars in the past few years by fraudulent wolf bounties. The Fairchild boys seem to have done a fine office business for a time but retribution came to them.

George Frabmader, proprietor of the large general store at Camp Douglas, brought the career of a couple of burglars to a sudden ending while they were attempting to burglarize his store. Mrs. Frabmader heard the breaking of glass in one of the store, whistled to her partner husband, who armed himself with a shotgun and quietly appeared at the scene. One man, a member of the store, called to his partner inside, and then attempted to run away. Mr. Frabmader fired at the fleeing man and brought him down with several shots in his head and breast. The robber inside surrendered when he found that escape was impossible. The injured man sustained several painful spots on his anatomy where the bird shot took effect, but the wounds are not expected to be serious.

Tomah Journal.—One of the worst fires that have ever been in Tomah in years broke out last Friday afternoon in the City Garage, owned by Emil Janke, and destroyed the building, machinery, stock and several automobiles, besides damaging adjoining property. The fire started in the shop in the rear part of the building, but just how no one can tell, altho' several men besides Mr. Janke were there at the time. He and others attempted to smother the blaze by throwing sand on it but failed and within five minutes it got so hot that it passed through the walls of the building. By the time the fire department arrived and got into action the entire building was enveloped in flames. Frequent explosions were heard as the gasoline tanks were reached by the flames and some fear was felt that the big tank underground containing 150 gallons of gasoline might explode. There being no possibility of saving the garage, the firemen directed their efforts to saving the neighboring buildings which were threatened. They shot at the rear of the residence and garage also caught fire, but the firemen checked the flames here and prevented their spreading to the residences across the alley. Losses in this fire amounted to upwards of $30,000. Mr. Janke, owner of the garage, loses practically everything. Insurance rates on his garage were prohibitive and he was without insurance except $750 on supplies. His claim, invoiced between five and six thousand dollars, and is a total loss.

Ashland.—The Ashland Fire Department is to be motorized as soon as practicable, members of the fire and police commission have decided.

DON'T SELL YOUR FARM
WHEN MARKETING CROP

The Farmer-Farmer disseases grain and stock farming from the standpoint of fertility as follows:

Exclusive grain raising robs our soil of its fertility mighty fast. When we succeed in raising a good grain crop it brings us money "but one a year" and we have to spend thirty days on the road marketing the crop. How different with stock raising and dairying. Fertility on the farm is maintained and more; money comes the year around; and the marketing problem is reduced to the minimum.

We submit the following figures in support of our contention:

For every $100 worth of the following products is removed fertility from the soil as follows:

$100 wheat reduces fertility $24.00

$100 cattle reduces fertility $85.00

$100 horses reduces fertility $35.00

$100 butter reduces fertility $1.25

The above figures are on the basis of the cost of replacing the essential elements of fertility that are removed clearly d. case.

As a result, the strongest precautions are advised to prevent an outbreak of the malady among humans.

Dr. C. A. Harper, state health officer and Dr. W. D. Stevall, bacteriologist of the state hygiene laboratory, after a conference on Monday, agreed that stringent measures must be taken by residents of the vicinity to prevent the spread of this and property. Special attention should be paid to any illness in cattle or horses, and dogs and cats should be watched for signs of illness. The muzzling of all dogs running at large for 60 to 90 days is strongly recommended. If new cases develop, the muzzling process should be continued in the vicinity. Health officers are empowered to order infected animals killed, and municipal or town boards may adopt ordinances to control the situation if necessary. It is recommended, however, that the dog owners at once get and obtain a dog license. According to health board authorities, unless it is practically unknown in Europe and Australia, these countries enforce muzzling laws rigidly. In England, for example, all dogs coming to England must remain muzzled for at least six months to prevent communication of rabies existing in latent stages of rabies.

AUTHOR OF "SILVER THREADS AMONG THE GOLD" HONORED

Eben E. Rexford, author of "Silver Threads Among the Gold," has been honored as being one of Wisconsin's most distinguished citizens. Though his name may not be remembered by all who knew his song, that song has gone around the world. "Silver Threads Among the Gold" has been sung in Palermo and Rome. Royalty has listened to it, and applauded it, and it has found a response in the people of every class. Eben E. Rexford received only $3 for it, but it made a fortune for C. K. Naris, who published it. Rexford lives in a home on the banks of the Wolf river, near Shiocton in Outagamie county.

PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE DISCOURSES CAUSE AND CURE OF PELLAGRA.

Announcement was made at the Treasury department today that as a result of continued research and experiments of the Public Health Service, both the cause and the cure of pellagra have been discovered, and that there has been an increase in the United States at a terrific rate during the past few years, may now be checked and eventually eradicated. Assistant Secretary Newton, in charge of the Public Health Service, expressed great interest at the discovery and regards it as one of the most important achievements of the medical service in recent years.

Pellagra has been increasing alarmingly throughout the United States past eight years, and it is estimated that 75,000 cases of the disease will have occurred in the United States in this year, of this number at least 2,500 will have died before the end of the year. In many sections only tuberculosis and pneumonia exceed it as a cause of death.

The final epoch-making experiment of the Public Health Service was carried out at the farm of the Mississippi State Penitentiary about eight miles east of Jackson, Mississippi, and, together with the previous work of the Service completes the chain in the prevention and cure of pellagra.

The work at the Mississippi farm has been in charge of Surgeon Joseph Goldberger and Assistant Surgeon G. Wheeler of the United States Public Health Service. The farm consists of 2200 acres in the center of which is the convict camp. The final experiment was undertaken for the purpose of testing the possibility of producing pellagra in healthy human white adult males by a restricted, one-sided, mainly carbohydrate (carbohydrate) diet. Of the eleven convicts who volunteered for this experiment, six developed a typical dermatitis and mild nervous gastro-intestinal symptoms.

Experts, including Dr. E. H. Galloway, the Secretary of the Mississippi State Board of Health, Dr. Nolan Stewart, formerly Superintendent of the Mississippi State Hospital for the Insane at Jackson, Dr. Marcus Haase, Professor of Dermatology, Medical College of the University of Tennessee, Memphis, Tenn., and Dr. Martha R. Engman, Professor of Dermatology in the Washington Medical School, St. Louis, Mo., declare that the disease which was produced in this farm was the same as that which was produced in the convict camp.

During the commencement of these experiments no history could be found of the occurrence of pellagra on the penitentiary farm. On this farm are 75 or 80 convicts. Governor Earl Brewer offered to pardon twelve convicts who would volunteer for the experiment. They were assured proper care throughout the experiment, and more than sufficient to sustain life. It differed from that given the other convicts merely in the absence of meats, milk, eggs, beans, peas and other similar protein foods. In every one of the convicts the convicts selected for the experiment were treated exactly as were the other convicts. They had the same routine work and discipline, the same periods of recreation and the same water to drink. Their quarters were better than those of the other convicts. The diet given them consisted of biscuits, fried mush, grits and brown gravy, syrup, corn, bread, cabbage, sweet potatoes, rice, collards and coffee with sugar. All the components of the dietary were of the best quality and were properly balanced, a publication and a determination to see if convicts were afflicted with any other disease, they were kept under observation from February 4th to April 9th, two and a half months, or until the date the one side diet was begun.

Although the occurrence of nervous symptoms and gastro-intestinal disturbances was noted early, it was not until September 12th, or about five months after the beginning of the restricted diet, that the skin symptoms so characteristic of pellagra developed. The symptoms are considered as typical, every precaution being taken to make sure that they were not caused by other diseases.

The convicts upon whom the experiment was being made, as well as twenty other convicts who were selected as controls, were kept under continual medical surveillance. No cases of pellagra developed in camp excepting among those men who were on the restricted diet. The experimenters have therefore drawn the conclusion that the pellagra has been kept in check six of the eleven volunteers as a result of the one-sided diet which they subsisted.

On the basis of this discovery, the states of Mississippi, Louisiana and Florida have laid their propaganda thru their respective boards of health for the eradication of the disease.

NEWS NOTES FROM NEARBY PLACES

A. F. Brown of Stevens Point received a $100 cash prize last week from the State Fair for having built the best firewood heater there being in the state. The prize fund was established by the Lake, north of Stevens Point, which is a wood-burning district.

Walter E. Denech, Edward Rous, well known as a leader of Wisconsin's timber industry, has been engaged on construction of a dam on a job of considerable magnitude. He had been engaged in similar work and used gasoline to move the logs. An explosion occurred and his hand was cut off. He is still being treated in the hospital, but it is doubtful if he will ever be able to fully recover from his injury. The details of the accident and its cause were not divulged.

The above story at Stevens Point describes the recent building of a new bridge over the Wolf River by W. H. Albert, a young man who has recently returned from the war, was built on the head by the Wolf River, with a height of 12 feet, length. His skill was manifested in the building of a series of arches, one in the top and another at the bottom. It is reported that his hand was severed in the explosion and it is doubtful whether the operation will be successful.

Plankinton, one of the largest and most important of cities in western Wisconsin, has been visited by a team of public health officers from Plankinton who have been in Plankinton since the 1st of October. They have been investigating their catch in the hospitals and clinics throughout the state.

Several months ago, Messrs. Pratt & McMillen purchased the land of cattle farm of about 1,000 acres, just outside of Plankinton, and have since been operating it as a farm. They have been purchasing their catch in the hospitals and clinics throughout the state.

Announcement was made at the election of Hon. Paul C. Hartman as U.S. Senator, and it is expected that he will be appointed to the Senate in Washington, D. C., to fill the seat of Senator G. B. Hastings, who has been elected. The new senator will be a member of the Senate.

Wisconsin State Senator, G. W. Conroy, W. J. Gibbons and A. E. Taylor, the men who are making the soil survey of Wood County, were here Tuesday with Tom Rice, who is the government inspector for this district. Mr. Rice was checking up and inspecting the work done on the survey in Wood County. The boys are just finishing up the survey at Plankinton, which covers a third of the county.

More than 200 arrests have been made in the county this winter and the men will be drawn from the field. It will probably be a year before the traps will be in circulation. There will also be a ballot box placed covering the work done in Wood County and describing the different kinds of oil found.

Neilville, Wis.—H. S. Livermore of Fairchild was arrested last week by state authorities charged with collecting the bounty on twelve men never killed. He paid a fine of $100, $10 on each of the separate counts. More arrests are to come as Livermore testified that he paid town chairman $5 for each certificate issued, thus retaining $75 on each bounty for himself. Edward Waller and Louis Potts, also of Fairchild, were fined $20 each for the same offense. The state game warden's office has been working on the case, and lately it is believed that the state has been defrauded out of almost a half million dollars in the past few years by trappers with bounties.

Friedlander, proprietor of the large general store at Campion, brought the care of a couple of burglars to a sudden ending when they were attempting to burglarize his store. As Friedlander heard the breaking of glass in one of the stores, he rushed to his partner, who armed himself with a shotgun and quietly appeared on the scene. One man on the outside of the store, while his partner inside, and then attempted to run away. Mr. Friedlander fired at the fleeing man and brought him down. Several shots in his head and breast. The robber inside surrendered when he found that escape was impossible. The injured man sustained several painful spots on his anatomy where the bird shot took effect, but the wounds are not expected to be serious.

Tonish Journal.—One of the worst fires that has occurred in Tonish in recent years broke out last Friday afternoon in the City Garage, owned by Ruth Janke, and destroyed the building, machinery, stock and several automobiles, besides damaging adjoining property. The fire started in the shop in the rear part of the building, and then spread to the front. If you expect to need some money, call and talk it over.

DON'T SELL YOUR FARM WHEN MARKETING CROP

The Banker-Farmer discusses grain and stock farming from the standpoint of fertilizing as follows:

Exclusive grain raising robs our soil of its fertility mighty fast. When we succeed in raising a good grain crop, it brings us money "but one a day," and we have to spend thirty days on the road marketing the crop, now different with stock raising and dairying. Fertility on the farm is maintained and more; money comes the year around; and the marketing problem is reduced to the minimum.

We submit the following figures for support of our contention: For every $1000 of the following products there is lost in reduced fertility from the soil as follows:

$1000 wheat reduces fertility $10.00
$1000 cattle reduces fertility $85.00
$1000 horses reduce fertility $5.00
$1000 butter reduces fertility $1.25

The above figures are on the basis of the cost of replacing the essential elements of fertility that are removed from the soil under the various practices. The production of butter not only to bring the farmer higher return than grain farming, but it also retains the fertility of the soil. The dairy industry in Wisconsin accounts for the permanence of the fertility of the soil. The dairy industry also enables the farmer to keep up the humus element in the soil as a protection against droughts.
